Seminar: Hard Condensed Matter Theory

Room: Gernott-Gräff-Raum (Staudinger Weg 7, room 05-43)
Time: July 6th, 2016 at 13:45

Martin Stier
Universität Hamburg

Current-induced Skyrmion creation and Skyrmion fission

Magnetic Skyrmions are considered to be topologically stable objects. However, in discrete lattices this topological protection is not infinite but can actually be overcome. This means that Skyrmions can be created or destroyed. We show how this can be done theoretically by electrical currents which may be either in-plane or out-of-plane direction.

All interested are cordially welcome!